

Ethiopia: Conflict, Hunger and Aid Security

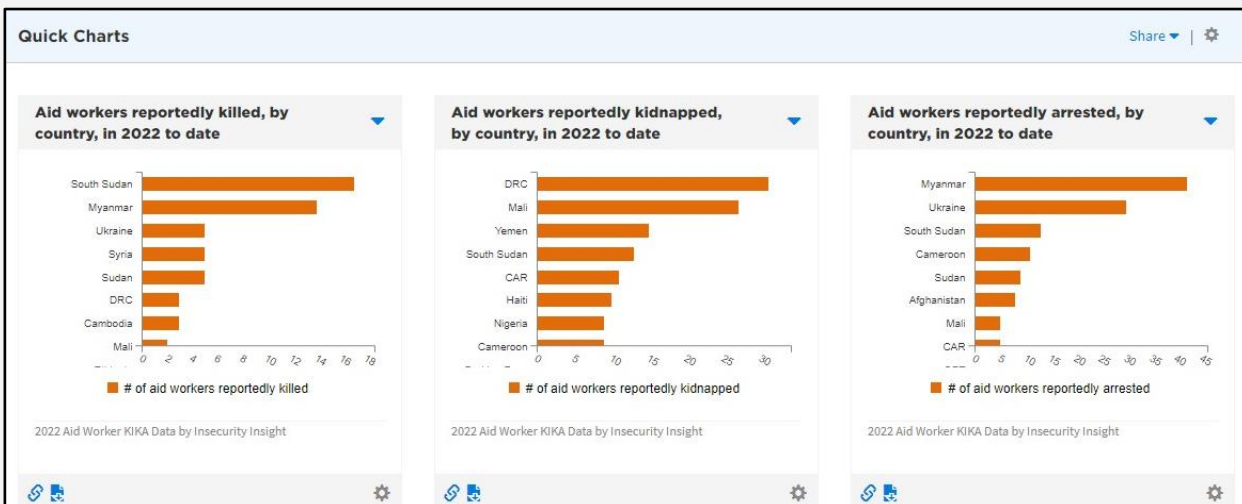

At the end of 2022 Ethiopia remains in a period of food insecurity that the WFP in its Famine Early Warning System has reported as “among the worst globally. In May 2018, the UN Security Council adopted Resolution 2417, which “recalls the link between armed conflict and violence and conflict-induced food insecurity and the threat of famine” and called on all parties involved in armed conflict to comply fully with IHL. The large-scale deterioration in food security in Ethiopia suggests that conflict dynamics have affected aid access and food security.

This report examines examples of conflict events that have affected aid access and humanitarian efforts to address food insecurity in Ethiopia. It highlights how disinformation campaigns can undermine aid agencies’ humanitarian principles and how the increasing use of remotely delivered explosive munitions increases the complexity of the risks faced by aid workers and humanitarian operations on the ground.
